

Transition Time

What does it mean to transition?

Right around the time our Early Head Start children turn 2.5 we talk with their parents about what it means to transition. Transition simply means that your child's enrollment transitions, or moves, from the Early Head Start (EHS) Program into the Preschool Head Start (PHS) Program. This process does not happen automatically. It requires a little effort on your part but has great potential benefits!

What are the options?

*What does it mean to transition early?

You can choose to have your child transition early (as soon as they turn 3) instead of having them wait until the next fall. This option is based on openings in the class you want and other children on the wait-list. Make careful consideration of your child's development and temperament potentially being in a classroom with some 5 year olds.

Note

If your family does not qualify, a committee will look at all of the factors affecting you and your child to decide if your child will be transitioned. There are only a small number of spots that can be used for over-income children and are saved for those with the highest need. If the committee determines your child will not transition, your advocate and educator/teacher will talk with you about other preschool options in the community and will work with you until an appropriate transition out of the program can be made.
